

National Power's Storm Team Supports Texas Power Outages

Raleigh, N.C., February 19, 2021 – National Power announced it is supporting customers in Texas during power outages caused by Winter Storm Uri. National Power's Storm Team mobilized around the clock this week, securing fuel and mobile generators for customers in Texas. These customers have mission-critical operations, including data center and communications infrastructure with large power loads. National Power's first fuel replenishments arrive in Texas today, providing much needed relief.

Chris Hutter, National Power's Chief Executive Officer, stated, "We are proud to support customers in Texas in this difficult situation. Our Storm Team has been working tirelessly to secure fuel, mobile generators, and transportation in a very difficult market which is challenged by scarcity. We understand mission critical operations and the urgent need in Texas and will continue to work to support customers for the duration of this unfortunate event."
